Three-dimensional production

The future of Tarnished

We are striving for the best, and we have prepared Tarnished as a product in order to live up to the expectations of players.

It was the testing of a single prototype that led to the ETAB being able to test the experience of our players.

Furthermore, not only have we studied the feedback, but we have also started to incorporate the feedback into our process, just as we have already begun working on and testing the next campaign. We will be able to prepare for the continuous feedback from our fans in the future.

We would like to work on new scenarios that will excite people on the net a lot, and support it with the development of more friendly and user-friendly games. We will be working on new characters we have not announced here.

Of course, Tarnished will come back into the spotlight, along with the next product. We want to share the improved Tarnished with everyone who played the previous product.

Pre-orders on Playism will begin in October. We will provide more detailed information at a later date.

Thank you everyone for your continued support!

Can I get some pointers on the process? I know this is a little off-topic, but I feel it is important for me to ask this. If a very large list of items can be viewed by attaching a URL to each name, is it safe to assume that this information can be obtained by request? If I'd want to request a list of all items that have been used up for a certain card game, would it be safe to assume that all of this information can be obtained by request, or is there any additional information needed? For the sake of the security of the game, I would be very interested in knowing if there is or will be any sort of data protection system. This is good news! Good work pal! You really have a good grasp on the web and I believe that you will be able to make this game popular! :) I hope you don't mind me asking but what makes this game so unique? You mentioned a vast world and a complex design, but what about the game itself? How does it differ from other card-based games such as Magic: the Gathering, Netrunner, Dominion, Blackwing Lair, and more?!It's no secret that
